MEMORANDUM FOR [REDACTED]

SUBJECT: Study of Intelligence and Counterintelligence Activities on the Eastern Front and In Adjacent Areas During WW II.

25X1A8a

1. The attached study has been prepared by [REDACTED] the discharge of Agency responsibilities under NSCID 5. It is based on information contained in periodic reports which field teams of the German Security Service (SD) submitted to their headquarters, i.e., the Reichssicherheitshauptamt (RSHA). These reports contained data about German intelligence, counterintelligence and security activities, as well as information which the Germans were able to gather about Communists, about the RIS, and various dissident groups opposing the German occupation authorities.

2. Although the field team reports were usually repetitive and frequently devoid of detail, they nevertheless yielded sufficient information to permit compilation of this study which includes, among other items, the names of about 100 Soviet State Security (NKVD) operatives and approximately, an equal number of NKVD-directed and supported partisans. The names of these persons (and data about them), as well as others of possible interest, have been arranged in alphabetical order in a series of addenda as follows:

Addendum A - NKVD Operatives and Persons Connected With Them

B - Communist Subversives

C - Soviet Partisans and their Supporters Operating Behind the German Lines

GROUP 1
Excluded from automatic downgrading and declassification

D - Soviet Parachute Agents

E - German Occupation of the Baltic States --
Collaboration and Resistance

F - Ukrainian Nationalists

G - Members of the SS Who Participated in Mass Executions and Atrocities.

3. One segment of the German documents used in this study was captured at the end of WW II and was held in England by the Department of State and the British authorities; other records used were held in the US by the National Archives. The documents have since been microfilmed and returned to the Bonn Government. Microfilms, currently held in Washington, D.C. at the National Archives, may be examined by using the following references:

Specific document citations accompany the various alphabetical listings in the Addenda, in order to permit rapid identification of source material.

4. Facts cited in the study are taken from the captured documents; conclusions reached by analysts are denoted in each case or are patently evident as analytical comments. Similarly, all names of persons, places, or organizations are listed as they appeared in the original records, except for English transliterations of the very obvious or most common names.

5. The names of persons cited in this study have not been traced in records of the Clandestine Service, of other CIA components, or of other US government agencies. Similarly, no name checks have been requested from appropriate foreign intelligence or security services. It is presumed that such tracing and follow-up action, as appropriate, will be initiated and pursued by the branches and stations concerned. For this purpose a number of copies of this study have been prepared on US government sterile paper and are available upon request. Also available are unpagged copies of this study in order to permit release of selected segments to foreign intelligence or security services. However, this Staff requests prior notification if any of the information is forwarded to the field or to other intelligence or security services.

6. Transmittal of this study to other US Government agencies, and any required domestic follow-up action will be undertaken by this Staff.

7. One copy of the study is being forwarded to RID for inclusion in the CS records system. Indexing of all names of persons cited in Addenda A through D will be requested of RID/Analysis. RID will be requested to index names of persons in the other Addenda 25X1A2g Recipients are requested to examine Addenda E through G for additional indexing as required and for cross-referencing as appropriate. Pertinent indexing and cross-referencing notations made by recipients should be forwarded to RID/Analysis for action.

8. Comments concerning the study are invited; particularly encouraged are suggestions for further exploitation of the leads contained in the captured records.
